

A full-length photograph of Regina Robertson against a blue background. She is wearing a dark denim bucket hat, a long denim jacket over a pink top and a dark skirt with a large belt buckle. She is holding a white feather in her right hand and a brown handbag in her left. She is looking upwards and smiling.

“I am bohemian down. My hair is short and natural. And I wear long skirts and boots—from ankle-high to combat style—with everything. I also love wrap dresses—they’re one piece and you don’t have to worry about adjusting yourself all day.”

Her Gig: Freelance writer.

Career Goal: I want to continue freelancing because I enjoy my freedom, but eventually I would like to work on the editorial staff of a woman’s lifestyle magazine. I’d also like to work with kids—teaching.

Signature Equity: While I love boots, it’s really about the earrings. I am an earring queen. None of them cost more than $100, but they are like my children. I lost a hoop last week and I almost committed suicide because I couldn’t find it. I bought them from a jewelry guy near Urban Outfitters, and I hunted him down. I told him, I cannot go on without my earrings!

Don’t Go There: I can’t stand looking fabulous and not being comfortable. I coined the phrase “casually fabulous.”

What She’s Wearing: Denim Jacket by H&M, $39. Pink top, $49; skirt, $99, both by EMME. Denim “Alicia” hat by Jaqueline Lamont, $145. Handbag by Cole Haan, $225. Belt by Kimberly Faith, $130. Hoop earrings by Bonnie J, $8. Necklace by A.V. Max, $28.
